Providing Strategic Security Solutions

What is a “suspicious character”? It is not always easy to decide when a person is “suspicious”. When asked how they decide someone fits this category, most people say they “just feel it”. The responsibility to be discerning falls on everyone—from the frontline defence to the executive in transit in the building’s lift.

Take the guesswork out of deciding when somebody is “suspicious” with the techniques of Security Profiling. Through a series of steps, make sense of the concepts and methodology in logically making the judgment call with higher reliability—your first step in averting potential disaster, at the very first signs.

Course Synopsis:

This security training course is a professional course that is specially designed to provide participants with the security profiling tools, which can then be integrated into their security measures as part of the operating procedures. The objective is to equip participants with the competency to outline a method of operations in search for incriminating behaviors.

Course Benefits:

1. Take the guesswork out of deciding when a person is “suspicious”
2. Distinguish the differences between profiling and crude stereotyping
3. Make the judgment call with higher reliability
